

Name /
Team Name

Score

True ✓ or False ✗ Famous People 2

Jeffrey Dahmer's neighbours in his Milwaukee apartment said he was a nice, quiet guy who occasionally gave them "homemade" sandwiches.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Austrian composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart began composing at the age of four or five, and the term "Wunderkind" is often attributed to him.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

British guitar legend Eric Clapton was expelled from Kingston College of Art for strumming his guitar too much.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin was so paranoid that he had scientists examine people's feces, including Mao Zedong's during a visit, to judge their loyalty and mood

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

John Stonehouse, a British politician, embezzled money, faked his death in Miami in 1974, was found alive in Australia two weeks later, and only served three years in prison due to poor health.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

While developing his theory of evolution, Charles Darwin also invented the modern office chair by adding wheels to create a swivelling chair.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Mozart's older sister Maria was a musical prodigy but was pushed into marriage because it was a man's world at the time.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Queen Elizabeth II once had a pet chameleon given by Lord Louis Mountbatten, which she and Princess Margaret fed on dead flies and buried in a white coffin when it died.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Helen McCrory, who played Polly Gray in 'Peaky Blinders,' watched many clips of Ozzy Osbourne to learn the Birmingham dialect, joking her character was "Ozzy in a skirt."

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Lord Alan Sugar hired strippers for his 50th birthday party.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Elton John owns a swimming pool shaped like his penis.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

Vincent Van Gogh tried to poison himself by swallowing urine.

☐ ✓ True

☐ ✗ False

QUESTION	ANSWER	DID YOU KNOW?
1. Jeffrey Dahmer's neighbours in his Milwaukee apartment said he was a nice, quiet guy who occasionally gave them "homemade" sandwiches.	1. True 2. True 3. False	1. Dahmer's neighbours were unaware of his gruesome crimes, which is why the "homemade" sandwiches he gave were especially chilling in hindsight.
2. Austrian composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart began composing at the age of four or five, and the term "Wunderkind" is often attributed to him.	4. True 5. True 6. True	2. "Wunderkind" means "wonder child" in German and was popularized to describe Mozart's extraordinary early talents.
3. British guitar legend Eric Clapton was expelled from Kingston College of Art for strumming his guitar too much.	7. True 8. True	3. Eric Clapton attended Kingston College of Art but left voluntarily to focus on his music career. There's no record of him being expelled for playing guitar too much — his passion simply led him to a legendary career instead!
4. Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin was so paranoid that he had scientists examine people's feces, including Mao Zedong's during a visit, to judge their loyalty and mood.	9. True 10. False 11. False	4. Stalin's extreme paranoia extended to bizarre methods like this, reflecting the intense distrust and fear within his regime.
5. John Stonehouse, a British politician, embezzled money, faked his death in Miami in 1974, was found alive in Australia two weeks later, and only served three years in prison due to poor health.	12. False	5. Stonehouse's dramatic disappearance and fake death inspired movies and books, highlighting one of the strangest political scandals in UK history.
6. While developing his theory of evolution, Charles Darwin also invented the modern office chair by adding wheels to create a swivelling chair.		6. Darwin's invention was practical—he needed a chair that could move around easily while working in his study.
7. Mozart's older sister Maria was a musical prodigy but was pushed into marriage because it was a man's world at the time.		7. Maria Anna Mozart, known as "Nannerl," had immense talent but faced social limitations that prevented her from gaining the same fame as her brother.
8. Queen Elizabeth II once had a pet chameleon given by Lord Louis Mountbatten, which she and Princess Margaret fed on dead flies and buried in a white coffin when it died.		8. The Queen's love for animals extended beyond corgis to exotic pets, and her care for the chameleon showed her affectionate side.
9. Helen McCrory, who played Polly Gray in 'Peaky Blinders,' watched many clips of Ozzy Osbourne to learn the Birmingham dialect, joking her character was "Ozzy in a skirt."		9. McCrory's dedication to authenticity helped bring the gritty world of 'Peaky Blinders' to life through convincing accents and mannerisms.
10. Lord Alan Sugar hired strippers for his 50th birthday party.		10. Despite rumours, there's no evidence Lord Alan Sugar hired strippers for his birthday.
11. Elton John owns a swimming pool shaped like his penis.		11. The story about Elton John's pool is just an internet myth.
12. Vincent Van Gogh tried to poison himself by swallowing urine.		12. Van Gogh is better known for cutting off part of his ear, not for trying to poison himself.