ONE FOR THE BAR!

1. 🍷 Outlander begins with Claire Randall stepping through some very inconvenient standing stones.
2. 🐮 Yellowstone made ranch politics look more dangerous than most actual pub arguments.
3. 🎭 Patrick Robinson played Martin "Ash" Ashford, because apparently one name just wasn't dramatic enough for Holby.
4. 👑 Charles Dance played Lord Mountbatten, bringing serious Tywin Lannister energy to royal family politics.
5. 🐶 Scully's dog Queequeg was named after a character from Moby-Dick, because even pets in The X-Files came with homework.
6. 🍷 The Good Wife opened with Alicia slapping Peter — and ended with Diane slapping Alicia. Full circle, full drama.
7. 🇬🇧 London's Burning followed Blue Watch, making firefighting look heroic, sweaty and emotionally exhausting.
8. 🏠 Arthur's "her indoors" became one of British TV's great unseen spouses — powerful, feared and never needing screen time.
9. 🌴 The White Lotus has taken its guests to Hawaii, Sicily and Thailand — proving luxury holidays are better with murderously bad vibes.
10. 🚂 Hell on Wheels turned railroad construction into mud, revenge and beard-heavy drama.
11. 🎭 Damian Lewis's Nicholas Brody kept viewers guessing for years, which is impressive for a man who mainly looked traumatised.
12. 🍷 The Great happily describes itself as "occasionally true", which is history's way of ordering another round.
