Jessica Lange originally only signed on for one season of American Horror Story... but ended up becoming one of the show's biggest icons after fans became obsessed with her performances.

7

Several cast members in Freak Show were real sideshow performers, helping give the season a more authentic old carnival atmosphere.

2

The creepy Murder House from Season 1 is a real mansion in Los Angeles – and after the show aired, the owners reportedly had fans constantly turning up outside wanting photos!

8

Lady Gaga won a Golden Globe for her role as The Countess in Hotel – despite it being her very first major TV acting role.

3

The terrifying clown Twisty from Freak Show became so popular with fans that many people said he was scarier than Pennywise from IT.

9

The “Piggy Man” legend appears in multiple American Horror Story seasons, becoming one of the show's recurring horror myths.

4

Many scenes in Asylum were inspired by real-life psychiatric hospitals from the 1960s, including some genuinely disturbing treatment methods once used on patients.

10

Roanoke was deliberately designed to confuse viewers at first, with producers hiding the season's theme almost entirely before release.

5

Stevie Nicks loved the Coven season so much that she appeared in the show as herself – complete with shawls, mystical vibes, and a live performance!

11

Evan Peters once admitted some of his American Horror Story roles affected him mentally because of how dark and disturbing the characters became.

6

The eerie Cortez Hotel in Hotel was inspired by the real-life Cecil Hotel in Los Angeles – a place linked to mysterious deaths, disappearances, and urban legends.

12

The creators of American Horror Story purposely reuse actors in different roles every season – meaning fan favourites often return completely transformed each year.
