

⇒ Crafted with care... Stirred to Perfection ⇒

1. One sheep, two sheep... or something else entirely — what is the correct plural form of the word sheep?
2. From molten beginnings to layers and pressure — into which three main categories do scientists classify rocks?
3. A nation shaped by complex history — what are the two main ethnic groups traditionally associated with Rwanda?
4. A bold red flag with a celestial theme — how many stars appear on the flag of China: 5, 7, or 9?
5. It describes dirt that's really worked its way in — and it's also the name of a gritty UK urban music genre. What's the word?
6. Which iconic London hotel was opened in 1906 by legendary Swiss hotelier César Ritz?
7. If an American asks you for your John Hancock, they're not after a history lesson — what do they actually want from you?
8. What name is given to the Indigenous hunter-gatherer peoples who lived in Australia long before European settlement?
9. If something or someone is extremely tough and resilient, they might be described as "Tough as old..." what?
10. A tegeologist is someone who collects what?
11. North of the border, patients don't use an NHS Number — what's the Scottish equivalent called?
12. In the famous abbreviation LSE, the full university name hides in plain sight — but what does the "E" actually stand for?

QUESTIONS

1. One sheep, two sheep... or something else entirely — what is the correct plural form of the word sheep?
2. From molten beginnings to layers and pressure — into which three main categories do scientists classify rocks?
3. A nation shaped by complex history — what are the two main ethnic groups traditionally associated with Rwanda?
4. A bold red flag with a celestial theme — how many stars appear on the flag of China: 5, 7, or 9?
5. It describes dirt that's really worked its way in — and it's also the name of a gritty UK urban music genre. What's the word?
6. Which iconic London hotel was opened in 1906 by legendary Swiss hotelier César Ritz?
7. If an American asks you for your John Hancock, they're not after a history lesson — what do they actually want from you?
8. What name is given to the Indigenous hunter-gatherer peoples who lived in Australia long before European settlement?
9. If something or someone is extremely tough and resilient, they might be described as "Tough as old..." what?
10. A tegeologist is someone who collects what?
11. North of the border, patients don't use an NHS Number — what's the Scottish equivalent called?
12. In the famous abbreviation LSE, the full university name hides in plain sight — but what does the "E" actually stand for?

ANSWERS

1. Sheep
2. Igneous, sedimentary, and metamorphic
3. Hutu and Tutsi
4. Five
5. Grime
6. The Ritz
7. Your signature
8. Aboriginal Australians
9. Boots
10. Beer mats (coasters)
11. CHI Number (Community Health Index Number)
12. Economics

ONE FOR THE BAR!

1. 🐑 Sheep is one of those rare English words that refuses to change — no matter how many are in the field.
2. 🪨 The rock cycle means a single rock can change category over millions of years... unlike most pub quiz teams.
3. 🌍 The terms Hutu and Tutsi originally referred more to social class than ethnicity before becoming ethnic identifiers.
4. ⭐ The large star represents the Communist Party, while the four smaller ones stand for the Chinese people united around it.
5. 🎧 Grime emerged in early-2000s London and helped launch stars like Dizzee Rascal and Skepta — dirt never sounded so good.
6. 🍺 Its name became so synonymous with luxury that it literally entered the dictionary.
7. 🇺🇸 He famously signed the US Declaration of Independence so boldly that his name became slang for "signature." Go big or go home!
8. 🏠 Representing one of the world's oldest continuous living cultures, their history stretches back over 60,000 years, rich in storytelling, art, and deep environmental knowledge.
9. 🥞 The phrase comes from hard-wearing boots built to survive marches, mud, and manual labour — making them a perfect symbol of toughness.
10. 🍷 Especially popular in Europe, beer mat collecting turns everyday pub items into sought-after collectibles with endless designs and themes.
11. 📄 This identifier follows Scottish patients for life — proving admin paperwork is universal, even north of Hadrian's Wall.
12. 🏛️ Despite the name, the London School of Economics teaches far more than money — including politics, law, sociology, and international relations.

POT LUCK #90

